

CONKLING ON HAYES.

Senator Conkling in a long interview with a press reporter gives, in substance, expression to the following views:

I believe that Louisiana affairs will come to light when it will be shown that Hayes made a bargain with Nicholls or his friends, and that Sherman and Matthews were privy to this bargain.

The result of this revelation will be to open the country's eyes to the character of Hayes. His bargains, corruption, etc., will be made public. Conkling then reviews at length the Electoral Commission. He says Hayes is filling offices with his friends, and that his civil service is a sham. He believes that it is impossible that the President and the Republican members of Congress shall ever become reconciled, because he is for one reason wholly in the hands of Southern Democrats. Speaking of the final vote, Conkling says:

I am frank to say that I thought then that there was something not exactly straight about that Louisiana business, and now I believe that when the whole truth is known, it will sink the administration, President and all, to the lowest depths of infamy.

Speaking of Hayes attempting to place power in the hands of his friends, Conkling says:

If Grant had attempted any such usurpation of authority the whole country would have rung with it, and he might not have escaped impeachment.

Concluding, the Senator said: Republicans in and out of Congress have borne a great deal from Hayes because he is a Republican President, but they are not quite prepared yet for Southern dictation. I can look for no good from the President and his cabinet. They haven't got it in them. When the people know him as well as Republican Senators do, the party will be thoroughly united, leaving out the administration.

This letter or letters and interviews were gathered together and made six columns in the New York World. No other paper had the same for publication. A Democratic paper voices the situation of the able Senator malcontent of New York. Conkling accuses Hayes of being unduly influenced by Southern Senators, and appears in a six-column article in a rank Democratic organ. As we take it, the Republican party is not in any danger of being disunited by reason of the present administration. Conkling has chafed before. Let him distort his reputation again. Republicanism occupies vantage ground not held one year ago. Conkling lies, or else the American people are ignorant knaves.

HAYES SUGGESTS A PLATFORM.

Before the formal assembly of the cabinet, Tuesday, the President said that a certain platform, if adopted, would be likely to reunite the Republicans, who could then control Congress. The following is the platform in brief:

First—Resumption of specie payments in gold and silver; second, resistance to all schemes for inflating the paper currency; third, a fair and moderate tariff that will afford reasonable protection to American industries; fourth, an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the use of money raised by public taxation for the support of sectarian schools; fifth, the speedy completion of all public work, such as river and harbor improvements, public buildings, fortifications, etc., now that labor and material are cheap, and workmen need employment; and a liberal policy for the improvement of the great national channels of commerce, like the Mississippi river and its tributaries. Members of the cabinet coincided with the President, and after some informal discussion, a sixth paragraph was added, declaring against the payment of claims to disloyal citizens for damages and losses growing out of rebellion, and the payment of pensions to persons who were disloyal during the war. With this addition, the platform was pronounced to be a fair presentation of the views of the administration.

The man who conceives that Hayes is a small man and has a poor, weak cabinet, reckons without his host. He finds evils to rectify, abuses to redress. Of course, when he gathered material and pursued his own plans to be honest with the people as he promised, he met and continues to meet with opposition. But, reader, have not his acts been wise and enduring? How like you the above platform? It has a solid ring to us.

Austria, however, steadfastly adheres to the solution by a congress.

SHOULD CEASE.

The Beecher-Tilton scandal continues to develop, and may yet spread for days or longer its salacious stench over the land. If Tilton induced his wife to advertise to the word that she is an adulteress, in order that he may vent his malice on Beecher, then those who sympathized with a man whom the Christian world said was wronged will desert him. Unfortunate Mr. and Mrs. Tilton are by her letter less respected in the United States to-day than at any time previous. These adulterous revelations do not benefit mankind; on the contrary they tend to dull one's moral sense and impair the influence of Christianity.

If Tilton wants to live with his wife let him say that he believes himself in error and that she is virtuous; if not, let him be generous enough to draw down the veil of charity.

MURDER IN KERN COUNTY.—Last Saturday H. Tucker and Wm. Johnson were killed near Long Tom, Kern county, Cal. Tucker was riding with his wife in one wagon, Johnson in another, with Mrs. Burdette, sister of Tucker. When within half a mile of Long Tom, on the Glenville road, two men stepped from behind the rocks on the hill side, fifty yards away, and fired. Johnson fell and cried out "I am shot." Another shot was fired, and Tucker fell out of his wagon, the ball passing near the heart, killing him instantly. Mrs. Tucker recognized Wm. and Thos. Yoakum, sons of the late Isaac Yoakum, of Alameda county, as the persons who fired the shots. Johnson died in a few moments. On the evidence of Mrs. Tucker the Yoakums were arrested and placed in jail. The murdered men were buried at Glenville on Monday. The difficulty grows out of a mine dispute of long standing. Great excitement exists in the neighborhood. The accused were to have had an examination on the 17th.

HE LEFT.—Says the Carson Appeal of Wednesday:

He leaned complacently upon the side gate of an uptown residence calmly surveying the placid physiognomy of a Celestial attended by a rolling pin. "Anybody home?" he carelessly inquired. Wak him tersely replied, "Lolling pin, he home, maybe you see him." He surveyed the domestic weapon and wished to know if he could be supplied with a small amount of provender. "Me make bread, not for tramp, you go way, me no like you." The seeker after nourishment at this point was disposed to be garulous and evinced a desire to subdue the Celestial by mild threats, while the latter advanced to the front which in this maneuver was a side attack, and aiming his instrument of punishment at the head of the intruder, struck the gate and knocked off the top of two pickets with the remark: "You alle same no workee man, say Chinese may go, me workee. You steale. You go be darn, me make hash your head." The representative of the bone and sinew of the nation went.

Grant's Reception in Athens.

General Grant's reception in Athens is described as a gracious one by an Athenian writing to the editor of the Troy Times. "On the part of the Greeks," he says, "there were waiting for him the Mayor of Piræus with the Council, who welcomed him on the part of their fellow-citizens as the representative of the generous people who had assisted the Greeks during the great war of independence against the Turks. The band of the town was playing all the time the American National hymn. The great crowd cheered very heartily our great citizen. Then the Mayor offered the General and his companions the carriage, and they all drove to the station where a special train was waiting for them. At the station was waiting myself with my little Evanthia, who was dressed in white and blue (the Greek colors), and who as soon as Mrs. Grant descended the steps of the carriage, offered her a bouquet of violets, among which thirteen roses, the symbol of your mighty Republic, were shining. Mrs. Grant was highly pleased at the happy idea. As it has been called by your Minister, Mr. Read, and she most affectionately embraced the little girl. As soon as the train started the people cheered again, and in ten minutes the train reached Athens, where the municipal authorities of Athens were waiting. The Mayor of Athens addressed the General about the same terms as the Mayor of Piræus had done, and the General again expressed the kind wishes of himself and nation toward the Greeks. The immense crowd that was waiting cheered him; then they drove to the New York Hotel, where an immense crowd was waiting to pay their respects to the guests of Greece."

NIAGARA RIVER.—The Niagara Falls Gazette of last week has the following: The water in the river reached a remarkably low mark last Thursday. As near as could be ascertained, without measurement, the river below the falls reached a level point eighteen feet below the average summer level. The water hereof walked on dry sand where, in the summer season, from off the "upper rock," anglers are wont to fish for bass and eels. Above the falls the river presented a very unusual appearance. Many rocks, usually hidden from view, rose black and naked from the rapids, and here and there a dry reef told yet plainer of the diminished supply of water from the lake. No water ran between Goat island and the First Sister island, and but slight streams meandered through the other two channels. During the day a blinding snow storm raged, covering the ground with the heaviest fall of snow of the season. During the night the wind changed, and by morning the river had reached its level again.

Between science and religion, but the conflict is really between religion and a certain class of scientists. The utterances of many whose names are written high in science temples, unmistakably recognize God and the religion of the Bible. Professor Dana, speaking of the Mosaic account of the creation, says: "Examining it as a geologist, I find it to be in perfect accord with known science; therefore, as a Christian, I assert that the Bible narrative must be inspired."

Messrs. Moody and Sankey are entitled to large sums from the sales of their new hymn books, but have steadily refused to touch the money, which in England alone amounts to $68,000. Hearing of an insinuation that his work was partly for pay, Mr. Moody said recently: "If you want to attack me, do not attack me there. I have weaknesses, but they are not in that direction. If I had come for money it would have been in some other work."

STRAIGHTENING TOOLS.—The Polytechnic says: It is not generally known that steel tools sprung in hardening can be straightened in tempering. Hardened, steel, when not enough to change the color to straw or purple, is about as pliable as annealed steel when cold. So pieces warped in hardening can, while hot, be straightened with a hammer, or, better, with a screw-press, without danger of breaking.
